Redwood City

Amateur Radio Op

By Jill Wallace

Scientists have long been predicting that a major earthquake will occur in the Bay Area, and many county agencies are constantly preparing in case disaster strikes. There also exists a league of private radio operators who spend their free time networking communications in case of disaster.

The South County Amateur Radio Emergency Service (SCARES) is a non-profit organization which consists of a group of amateur radio operators (hams) who own two-meter handy-talkie transceiver radios to perform various public services while having fun.

"Extra Eyes and Ears"

Amateur radio operators assist the Redwood City, San Carlos, and Belmont police departments, according to Dick Collins, president of SCARES, by "providing back up communications when needed." SCARES has an amateur radio station set up next to the Redwood City Police dispatcher.

During exceptionally hectic times such as Halloween, the ham radio station jumps with activity of incoming communication from various ham operators, who report any unusual activities in the community. Pertinent information is then relayed to the police dispatcher, and used accordingly.

Lily Anne Hillis, public relations director of SCARES says it is times like Halloween that amateur radio becomes forged during July 4th, when SCARES assists the Peninsula Celebration Association in maintaining an organized parade in Redwood City. Hillis says the 4th of July parade "...combines service with fun. One of the best kept secrets is that it's (amateur radio) really fun."

There are many service oriented activities which involve amateur radios. SCARES has installed an antenna on the roof of Sequoia Hospital, where they work in conjunction with Sequoia Hospital's "In House Emergency Preparedness" group, which trains hospital staff to cope with emergency situations. The group is associated too with "Operation Watch," where ham operators assist the police in looking for wandering convalescent elderly, lost children, and children who have been abducted.

"Private Applications"

Bill Wiltschko is typical of a ham radio operator. After receiving a level three license in the Navy (there are five levels of F.C.C. licenses for amateur radio broadcasting), Wiltschko left radio when he retired from the service.

"I'm just getting back into this," says Wiltschko. "I'm trying to do as much as I can whenever I can."

He said, "Only a week ago I got a flat on 280. I called AAA (on my mobile radio unit), and I called my wife. It saved me walking a long way. Its (ham radio) got private applications as well."

Pat Gormley, a local resident with Multiple Sclerosis, fell out of bed one day while being alone. With only his radio for help, he contacted a fellow ham operator who, in turn, contacted his wife.

"Purely Social"

Collins maintains that, other than "over the radio," there are three ways ham operators officially maintain contact. There is a "purely social" monthly brunch, and a weekly check-in every Monday night at 7:30. During a check-in, SCARES officers test equipment and antennas, as participants broadcast on 147.450 megahertz. In addition, the group has a monthly meeting at San Carlos city hall the third Thursday of each month at 7:30 p.m. Collins says these meetings are useful because it gives ham operators an opportunity to "discuss problems, air new ideas, and listen to guest speakers."

Hillis comments "amateur radio is very inclusive. Anybody that wants to become a radio operator is accepted. Getting a federal license is the initiation rite."

The ages of ham operators vary, and there are approximately 50 members in the South County chapter. Companies such as Hewlett Packard, IBM, and Intel have their own ham radio clubs. Private donations are "used to buy new equipment and update old."

Collins emphatically believes, "It is the total involvement and support of the membership that should be accredited with the successes of the program."

In order to get new members, Collins will be instructing a novice-level class for about 10 people beginning this month. Telephone 926-3935 for more information.

1988 CALIFORNIA QSO PARTY

What A Difference a Year Makes
Incredible conditions!
Great activity!
Lots of fun!

These are just a few of the ways that participants described the 1988 running of the California QSO Party (CQP), sponsored each year by the Northern California Contest Club (NCCC). The mediocre propagation which plagued the 1987 CQP, as well as the 1984, 1985, and 1986 Parties, gave way to some super band conditions in 1988. With the solar flux hovering near the 200-mark, the A at 5 and the K at zero, and low geomagnetic activity, it's no wonder that CQP entrants were able to form a 125 KC wide wall of RF on 10 sideband during both days of the contest!

Not only was propagation superb--so was activity. A record 364 logs were received from 56 of 58 California counties, 46 states, 7 Canadian sections, and 21 DXCC countries. It was another year of record-setting performances, as no less than 42 entrants set new single-op scoring marks--13 in CA and 26 out of state.

Many of the participants in the Cal QSO Party have concluded that the CQP is much more than just a contest. For most, it's plain and simply FUN! Unlike most other radiosporting events, in the CQP you don't need big antennas and an amplifier to make a good score. The Party provides out-of-state ops with the opportunity to work lots and lots of W6s, and to contact most or all of the counties they need for the NCCC-sponsored "Worked All California Counties" Award. And, for stations in the Golden State, it gives them the chance to "be DX," to be the "hunted" rather than the "hunters."

SPECIAL AWARD: TOP CLUB IN CALIFORNIA (SPONSORED BY PAARA)-- REDWOOD EMPIRE DX ASSN. (3 ENTRIES)-- 105,474 PTS. --DE GARY CALDWELL WA6VEF via FRED K6YT!-ED.

ANDY VE3FZK WILL HAVE A LENGTHY HUMAN INTEREST HAM STORY "NO SOAP RADIO" FOR INSPECTION AT NEXT MEETING. (DISCOVER MAGAZINE, JAN '89). -ED. NOTE=
